HENRY LINCOLN BAILEY, EDITOR

PUBLISHED BY THE SEMINARY 1927

PRESS OF T. MOREY & SON
GREENFIELD, MASS.

EDITORIAL NOTE

Only once before, in 1881, has Hartford Seminary published a biographical catalog of its alumni. The volume which then appeared carried 404 names of former students and should have included 13 more besides the 28 undergraduates who brought the total enrolment of 49 classes up to 445. This was a fairly homogeneous body of Congregationalists of whom at least 350 were born in New England. They were comparatively easy to trace by a biographical inquisitor. The 45 classes enrolled since that book was published have included 1074 students of many nations and tongues and varieties of ecclesiastical nomenclature. This broadening constituency is of course a matter for rejoicing for everybody except the editor of this book who must try to trace men into every mission field, under many boards, and pastors who move faster than their own denominational publications can record, as well as men who are not in the ministry and others who apparently do not want to be traced. The index of 1519 persons includes post graduate and special students but does not include those who, while enrolled in the other schools of the Foundation, took special courses in the Seminary.

In 1916 the Trustees authorized the publication of a new general catalog of the Seminary and appointed a Faculty committee on publication consisting of Prof Waldo S Pratt, Prof Arthur L Gillett, and Librarian Charles S Thayer. This committee entrusted the editorial work to Henry Lincoln Bailey of the class of 1889, advising as to form and style but without other restrictions. Soon after the work was begun the United States entered the World War. Matters of greater importance pushed the Catalog into the background, and printing costs soared out of reach. The editor assumed other duties and the Catalog was a side issue for several years. When it came to the front again the information gathered in 1917 needed bringing up to date by further correspondence which frequently was one-sided and futile. Where alumni could not be found or could not be persuaded to respond, the editor has used material from many other sources to manufacture a biography of sorts for those who would otherwise be "unhonored and unsung." The editor has had to edit many a career especially as to dates. One may hope that the theology of Hartford men is sounder than their statistical sense.

The Catalog is printed in condensed style but will be readily understood with a few words of explanation. One's academic career, "stud." includes preparatory school (perhaps), college and years of attendance or year of graduation (A.B. unless otherwise stated), and seminary, and where necessary the post graduate work also. A double date, '89-91, indicates attendance without graduation. Ordination unless specified is Congregational. The name of a state is not repeated in parish changes within the state. Denominational changes if temporary are indicated by parenthesis or comma; if permanent by a colon. Yet the editor has discovered in proof reading how extremely rare is that jewel named consistency, even in his own "copy" prepared across a space of ten years, but he believes that punctuation, abbreviations, etc., will not unduly confuse a seminary clientele carefully trained in Hebrew, Greek and other typographical mysteries.

Graduate and special students enrolled more than one year are listed with the date of their first year. The committee and editor deliberated long about the sequence of faculty names. To avoid repetition where professors have been moved from one chair to another, or where they have progressed from tutor to instructor and associate and full professorship, it was finally decided to list them chronologically from their first faculty appointment. Other contemplated features, such as a geographical index and a table of family relationships, have been omitted since the volume has outgrown its anticipated dimensions.

Finally a personal word needs to be spoken here to every former or future student who reads this page. You are in part responsible for the completeness or incompleteness of this volume and its successors. The Seminary follows with interest and sympathy every student on its rolls. It cares about them, very likely, a good deal more than some of them seem to about it. It craves continuous touch with you. It does not like to have a list of "lost souls" whom it cannot locate. Loyalty suggests, if it does not demand, that you keep the Seminary advised of important events in your career. It will immeasurably lighten the burden of the man who attempts the next edition of this Catalog perhaps in 1950.

HENRY LINCOLN BAILEY.

Longmeadow, Mass., May, 1927.

HISTORICAL NOTE

Hartford Theological Seminary was begun in 1833 by the action of thirty-six Connecticut Congregational ministers who organized themselves into the Pastoral Union of Connecticut which in 1834 secured a charter of incorporation for the Theological Institute of Connecticut. The school was opened in the fall of 1834 and the first class was graduated in 1836.

The first home of the Institute was in East Windsor Hill, where the original brick buildings still stand in ponderous aloofness. For thirty years in ferry and stage coach days the aloofness intensified, and in 1865 the institution was moved to Hartford and occupied buildings on Prospect street originally constructed for residences. The "annex" to the Hartford Public Library is the sole survivor of that group. In 1879 another move was made to Broad street, to the new Hosmer Hall, the gift of James B Hosmer, treasurer of the Institute. In 1891 the Case Memorial Library was added to the equipment.

In 1885 the corporate name was changed to Hartford Theological Seminary, and in 1913 the Seminary, the Hartford School of Religious Education and the Kennedy School of Missions were reincorporated as the Hartford Seminary Foundation. The growth of the allied schools offered serious housing problems which have finally been solved by the new campus and its group of stone buildings on Girard avenue and Elizabeth street which are dedicated simultaneously with this volume's appearance in May 1927.

Hartford Seminary was organized under Congregational auspices and continues such a denominational affiliation. But while its first half century was marked by the presence preponderantly of New England Congregational students, its latter decades have seen the reversal of the ratio, the majority of its students coming from many states and foreign lands and many denominations. Since 1889 women have had equal student privileges with men. While it was never a sectarian school it has been steadily broadening into a theological university, and the charter of the Hartford Seminary Foundation specifically pronounces it an interdenominational institution.

CAREW LECTURES

About 1874 a bequest from Joseph Carew of South Hadley Falls, Mass., was used as the foundation for the Carew Lectureship. The earliest discovered record of lecturers is in the Hartford Seminary column in the Congregational Quarterly of 1875 and a few succeeding years. The speakers were named but not their subjects. The list is given here as published, with the suspicion that not all the expected lectures were delivered in that academic year. The Carew Lectures, have ordinarily been given in the latter part of the academic year, but to insure accuracy the double date is used.
